

Revised Festival Plans for 2020

Due to the current issues surrounding the Covid-19 virus, the 73rd Maine Potato Blossom Festival has been cancelled in its original plans for 2020, but the “good news” is that as a committee we are currently working on a “revised” schedule of events that will meet the CDC guidelines for this year’s celebration.

It’s truly amazing what many creative minds can come up with for ideas when it is needed most, which is this year concerning this old family tradition held in the host community of Fort Fairfield, Maine.

Our goal this year is to bring some of the same events we have always had but with some revisions and guidelines to ensure visitors safety but yet allow them to enjoy themselves.

This a big challenge overall but one we are all willing to meet for the sake of bringing some much needed sunshine and hope in a time it is most needed.

We hope to have a revised schedule of events approved and ready to announce to the public and post on our website by the first part of June.

Please keep checking back with us for updates on this year’s Festival plans.

We are “HOME TOWN PROUD” and in this together!
